Tuesday 2 March

7.15pm, £15, Goethe-Institut, London

Tickets £15 / £10 Members

Venue address: Goethe-Institut, 50 Princes Gate, Exhibition Road, SW7 2PH

In this panel discussion design specialists from both Germany and the UK will examine the impact and implications of the work of Dieter Rams. In the way that Rams himself suggested, "question everything generally thought to be obvious", the debate will refer to the acknowledged influence this major figure has had on industrial design to see what has and could or should still be learnt from his methods and philosophy.

To bring his Ten Principles of good design up to date the audience will submit their ideal 11th principle at the end of the debate. The Design Museum proudly presents this informative discussion in partnership with the Goethe-Institut where the event will be held.

Panel to include Prof. Dr. Klaus Klemp (Head of Exhibitions Museum of Applied Art Frankfurt) and Mark Adams (Vitsoe).
